Rejecting the convention
That it's just make-believe
Is fun if it's the streets of Paris or a coffin-toting widow you see
But edifying if it's war-torn Troy
Or fearfully provocative if you're made to wait.
The reality is there, somehow.

Launching a new Career?

Consider textiles.
Textiles—where big things are happening. New plants. New machinery. New processes. New products. New colors. New finishes.
New end uses. Textiles.
Challenging and sometimes complicated.

Opportunities? Almost unlimited.

Try our Computer Center.
Our Administrative Offices.
Our Fabric Design Department.
Our Engineering Department.

And there's our Corporate Development Division. Research labs. Executive Offices. Our Production and Sales Divisions.
Marketing. Purchasing.
Accounting.

Textiles. Where the action is.

Office of, uh, Student Affairs?

The fresh young look is at Belk's

Because you will be.

When our students graduate and join businesses like yours, we want them to land running. And, if they can survive four years at St. Andrews, they probably will.

Because they will have mastered one of the toughest courses offered at any liberal arts college. Thirty-three hours of Christianity and Culture—including two years of Western Civilization, one year of Asian and African Culture, one year of Current Major Issues. In addition to the usual liberal arts curriculum.

Except that even our liberal arts curriculum isn't so usual.

In science, for example, our students are plunged into radical research programs that cross traditional disciplinary lines, that defy standard answers and academic clichés, that stretch a student's mind until it hurts.

(Aspirin is available at the dispensary.)

We don't teach our students how to memorize or how to generalize or how to synthesize. We teach them how to think.

So when men and women pass through St. Andrews on their way to an organization as tough as yours, they've got an edge. They can do more than spout the "Prologue" of Chaucer's Canterbury Tales. They can reason. They can question. They can endure.

If you hire any of our graduates, you'll find they still have a lot to learn, of course. But they're used to that. And we think you may be pleased at how soon they will begin to make contributions themselves.

Write our president, Ansley C. Moore, St. Andrews Presbyterian College, Laurinburg, North Carolina, for more information.
